

A Thought I Had Today

I am seriously concerned that our culture lacks the collective self discipline to survive. Let me explain.

It is my belief that at some point the number of individuals who want to live without rules, responsibility or consequences for their actions may reach "critical mass" and our great experiment with self government may decay into anarchy and chaos.

I do not know what that critical mass is but I suspect that five percent of our population cannot support the other 95 percent. The "math don't work".

Think about it. Most of the worlds great belief systems are founded in personal self discipline. Success in almost all endeavors requires we apply discipline to achieve goals. Consider Business, Academics & Sports. Am I wrong?

Bob Bandy