

HOLD CONGRESS LIABLE IN COURT?

CONGRESS AND THE ATTRACTIVE HAZARD LAW

We have laws in America that state if you build something dangerous but attractive and make it accessible to the public you can be held liable in court for any damages the public might incur. Including Punitive Damages.

A common example is that if you put a swimming pool on your property that children might find inviting and fun but you fail to fence it so that children cannot get into it and drown, you can be held liable in court should that occur

Simply put: If you create something that is attractive but ends up hurting people because you failed to provide safeguards, you can be held legally and financially responsible.

I suggest that we all find a "Good Attorney" - cross that out - "Good Attorney" is a contradiction in terms - make that a "Ruthless Attorney" - that's better - and file a Class Action Lawsuit against Congress for creating not one, but many "Attractive Hazard Government Programs" that have not only damaged our Country but in the process caused great damage and harm to our culture and the american family.

Members of Congress, House and Senate, should be held, individually and collectively, financially responsible for the damage they have caused. Some Punitive Damages would be well deserved also.

Example: The 1960's Great American Society program to eliminate poverty in America. Sounded good, looked good on paper and was perhaps well intended but poorly thought out and loaded with unintended consequences. A sort of Rube Goldberg Contraption imposed on the American public without a test flight. (The above pictured "flying machine" could well have been designed by a Congressional Committee.)

There are now more poor people trapped in poverty than when the program to eliminate poverty began. Millions of American families were destroyed in the process. Filling the country with angry, frustrated, fatherless young men raised without the discipline young boys need. By passing this law Congress said it was "okay" for men to create families and then abandon them to go "play" while "Government" would step into the void created and be "daddy". The damage caused is most obvious in poverty riddled and crime ridden inner-cities but also has manifested itself throughout the land. Who is most responsible for this mess? Congress. They should be held liable.

Can Congress realistically be sued and held to account financially? Unfortunately I think not. Congress creates all kinds of exceptions for themselves legally when they pass these "Programs" and have exempted themselves from most every law they pass, like "The (un)Affordable Health Care Act" and so many others.

Supposedly this can all be "fixed" at the ballot box. How has that worked out so far? I live in California and have voted all of my life. California is so corrupt, over taxed and mismanaged that I am ashamed to admit that I live here. It claims to have a "Balanced Budget" but has an almost One Trillion Dollar UNFUNDED Liability to its "Public Service Employees Retirement and Healthcare System". "Who gonna pay for dat". It cannot be Bankrupted.

The Trifecta of Clowns, Criminals and Lunatics have won. Voting is now a waste of time unless you enjoy the reality of living under the "Dark Lords" who run Sacramento.

Where is there a "good" attorney when you need one?
